I began taking pottery classes in 1992 at Abernathy Art Center in Atlanta, Ga. I have continued taking classes exploring a variety of interests through the years. I have studied different mediums with various instructors. I am presently in a handbuilding class in Atlanta with Red Weldon Sandlin as my instructor who has taught and mentored me throughout the last 15 years. I have also taken classes in Raku with Ed Thomas and wheel pottery with Vernon Smith. I presently take handbuilding when I am in St. Simons with Debbie Craig as my instructor.

I have attended a workshop with Ron Meyers in 2001. In 2005 I spent a week at the Hambidge Center in Clayton, Ga. taking a workshop with Debra Fritz in sculpture.

I have sold work at a holiday bazaar in Atlanta, the Gift Shop at the William Breman Jewish Home for the Aged and the Glynn Art Pottery Sale.

Most of my work is done with low fire clay and glazes. They are all food safe. I would call my work functional, eclectic and funky. I am inspired by the world around me and am always looking to make my work fun.
